++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Sunny intervals and showers, chilly with some night frost.

Today:
Some sunshine, however well-scattered showers to start with, becoming more widespread by afternoon. A few places could catch quite a heavy shower with hail, other locations dodging them. Rather cold, though perhaps feeling less so in sunshine and light winds.

Tonight:
Showers tending to fade back to exposed coastal counties, although the odd one could continue well inland. Many areas clear at times, with light winds allowing a frost in places.

Saturday:
A scattering of showers again, especially during the afternoon, with the odd heavier one still possible. Rather chilly but light winds and occasional sunshine should help to offset this.

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Sunshine and showers on Sunday before many see a wet and windy day on Monday, clearing back to sunshine and showers for Tuesday. Still chilly with some night frost.
